Faint text or lyrics written across the staves, possibly in a historical script.

Ad illa quae sunt in Petrus et Paulus

The page contains ten staves of handwritten musical notation. The notation includes various note values (minims, crotchets, quavers) and rests, with some staves beginning with clefs. The text is written in a historical script, likely Latin, and is arranged in a single column. A large, faint watermark or illustration is visible in the upper right quadrant, and a smaller decorative flourish is on the right side.

Handwritten musical score on aged paper, featuring multiple staves of music and some faint text. The notation is dense and appears to be a historical manuscript. The text is mostly illegible due to fading and bleed-through from the reverse side of the page. A large, ornate initial is visible on the right side of the page.

folium de tre

Handwritten musical score on aged paper, featuring multiple staves of music and some text. The page is heavily stained and has a large red rectangular mark on the right side. The text is mirrored across the page, suggesting bleed-through from the reverse side.

Visible text includes:

- folium de tre (top left)
- folium de tre (middle left)
- folium de tre (bottom left)
- folium de tre (middle right)
- folium de tre (bottom right)

The musical notation consists of several staves with notes and clefs, though the ink is faded and difficult to read. There are also some larger, stylized markings that could be part of the score or decorative elements.

Handwritten musical notation on aged, yellowed paper. The page features approximately 15 staves of music, with some staves containing lyrics written in a cursive script. The notation includes various notes, rests, and clefs, though the ink is faded and the paper is heavily stained and wrinkled. A prominent vertical crease runs down the right side of the page, and there are several dark spots and smudges throughout the manuscript.
