THE DEATHLESS ARMY.

'Twas golden noon in the city square,
I heard the drums and the trumpets' blare,
The gallant troops were must'ring there,
The flower of our brave old army,
Stalwart boys and vet'rans old,
Side by side in their red and gold,
With a cheer and a smile went rank and file,
In the van of our brave old army.

Marching for the dear old country,
Marching away to war,
With the hearts they love behind them,
And the flag they love, before.

Twas deep still night in the city square, Hushed were the drums and the trumpets' blare, But a phantom host was marching there, In the steps of the brave old army! Solemnly, silently through the night, Grim set faces and eyes so bright, As heroes look when they march to fight, At the head of a mighty army.

And then I knew in the still night-tide, What men were must'ring side by side, They were the men who had fought and died In the ranks of our brave old army. And their gallant swords may broken lie, Their bones may bleach 'neath an alien sky, But their souls, I know, will never die, They march in a deathless army.

Marching for the dear old country, Leading us for evermore, For the souls of the heroes die not In the land that they adore.
