- etc.* written below the first system.
- improvvisamente mosso* written above the second system.
- frescandos* written below the second system.
- con agitazione* written above the sixth system.

The paper shows signs of age, including a prominent brown stain in the upper right corner and some foxing throughout. The handwriting is fluid and characteristic of the 19th-century manuscript style.

This image shows a page of handwritten musical notation on aged, yellowed paper. The score is written in dark ink and consists of approximately 12 staves of music. The notation includes various note values, rests, and dynamic markings. A prominent annotation, "piano crescendo", is written in cursive across the middle of the page. There are also some numbers, such as "8", written near certain measures. The paper shows signs of age, including a large brown stain at the top left and some foxing throughout. The handwriting is fluid and characteristic of the 19th-century manuscript style.

The image shows a page of handwritten musical notation on aged, stained paper. The notation is written in dark ink and consists of two systems of music. The first system has two staves, and the second system also has two staves. The notes are mostly eighth and sixteenth notes, with some rests. There are some markings above the notes, possibly indicating dynamics or articulation. The paper is heavily stained, particularly on the right side, and there are some faint, illegible markings throughout.
