The Clang Of The Wooden Shoon.

Words and Music by J. L. MOLLOY.

Oh, the clang of the wood - en shoon, Oh, the dance and the mer - ry tune,... Hap - py sound of a by - gone day, It rings in my heart for aye,..... When the boats came in..... with the sail - ors all a - glow, And the moon shone down on the glist'n-ing tide be - low.... Oh, the clang of the wood - en shoon,

Oh, the dance and the mer - ry tune Hap - py sounds of a by - gone day, it rings in my heart for aye.....

Now, my lads, with a mer - ry will, Up with hatch and the bas - kets fill,.... Win-some las - sies a - bove ye stand Read - y with ea ger hand. Then the sails came down..... And all was taut and clear,..... And a wild, glad dance.... lit up the wood - en pier.... Oh, the rush of the trip - ping feet, Oh, the light - some hearts that beat, Wild and sweet the mer - ry tune and the clang of the wood - en shoon.....

Piu lento.

But they are gone.... a wea - ry while, ah, me,..... And he my own came home no more from sea, The sea looks black, The waves have all a lone..... Still I see them on the pier, All the kind - ly fa - ces near. Hear the wild and mer - ry tune. And the clang of the wood - en shoon.... When the boats came came in with the sail - ors all a - glow..... And the moon shone down.. on the rip-pling tide be - low..... Oh the clang of the wood - en shoon,

rings in my heart for aye..... for aye.
